For questions 21-27, indicate the correct answer (A, B or C) on your answer sheet.

A 'NORMAL' DAY

Tuesday starts just like any other for Sandy Sheringham, the new pop sensation. She gets up late in the morning, spends an hour or so lazing around the house, and then goes into the bathroom. This is where the hard work starts.

She takes well over an hour to wash, do her hair and get her make-up right. This wouldn't be so strange, except for the fact that it's only the first of many meetings with the mirror during the day. You've got to look right to be a pop star; it's even more important than having a good voice.

Sandy gets to the recording studio by about two o'clock and works until five, either singing a new song, or mixing something she's already recorded. It's a long, precise job which often lasts for days. The assistants in the studio have to be patient and understand exactly what Sandy wants, because she never accepts less than perfection.

Sandy has had number one success in over twenty-five countries, and she's preparing for a world tour next month. It will end with fifteen concerts in the United States. This is when her future will be decided: if she can win there, she'll be rich and famous for the rest of her life.

Sandy never goes to bed before the small hours: pop stars have a reputation for parties and nightclubs, and Sandy is not planning on being an exception. Sandy is lucky: a normal day for her is a dream for the rest of us.
